

In this folder we are asking the individual to organize their thoughts to enable them to change the things they want to change.

Pointers for Folder 20

In this folder we invite the men to get real about their expectations. It does no good to shoot for the moon without knowing how to build a rocket.

Change does not come easy. It's good to remind the men how difficult it is to accomplish change. This is why we need help from each other, and especially from God.

We use the example of a messy workbench versus a clean workbench to demonstrate how much easier life can be with the right tools in the right places.

All of this can only happen when we put our feet on the ground and we recognize what we have at hand. We must begin to work with what we have, and as we move along, build up our sources of tools to help us accomplish our tasks.

We need to remember that these serious changes don't happen overnight, or because we pray about it, or want them so much. These changes take time, but God has provided us the wisdom to find people, patience, and sources to help us if we truly want them.

We conclude by asking the question, "Am I tired of the life I'm living?" If the answer is "yes", we are tired enough to change that reality.

Perhaps, we can come to believe, as God does, that we are GOOD and that we are WORTH IT...and any sacrifice is good.

Let's all remember that God already knows that we are good.
